Today was a particular day. In a surreal atmosphere, all the students and members of staff paid homage to a teacher, Samuel Paty, who was assassinated for doing his job, for teaching the essential values that make us who we are.

Among the questions raised by the students, "Why" is the one that came up often. Asking oneself questions is a step forward to find answers and solutions.

No doubt education will eternally be the key to a more united and serene society. Today was a particular day because deeds speak louder than words, and this will never change.
